LAKOTA CODE TALKERS

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, during World War II, Lakota, Dakota, and Nakota soldiers from across the Great Plains served this country with honor and distinction as Code Talkers. These men sent messages in code, derived from their native languages, that the enemy was never able to decipher. They saved the lives of countless Americans, were responsible for major military victories, and provided an invaluable service to the United States, but they were sworn to secrecy about their operations in order to protect the code. As a result, their important contributions were not immediately recognized.

Only one of these heroes, Clarence Wolf Guts, survives today. Mr. Wolf Guts spoke Lakota at home, but—like many other Native youth—he was punished for doing so at school. Despite this, he enlisted in the Army at age 18 and served a 3-year tour in the Pacific. Mr. Wolf Guts and his fellow Code Talkers are an example of the proud service record of Native Americans, who make up a higher percentage of service men and women in the Armed Forces than any other ethnic group in America. They have served with honor in all of America's wars beginning with the Revolutionary War on through our current operations in Iraq.

In 2001, the Navajo Code Talkers were awarded Congressional Gold Medals for their service. In appreciation of the service of Mr. Wolf Guts, his comrades, and all Native American Code Talkers, I have cosponsored S. 2681, the Code Talkers Recognition Act of 2008. This legislation would ensure that all Native American Code Talkers which hail from at least 17 different tribes are all recognized and honored for their service.

In recognition of their service, the Rosebud Sioux Tribe and South Dakota State University plan to construct the Code Talkers Memorial Park in Mission, SD. Meant to inspire hope in the community, this park will feature a Memorial Grove of trees found on the home reservation of each soldier and will provide recreation and wellness opportunities as a part of the tribe's ongoing fight against youth suicide.

I want to honor and recognize these men for their service and sacrifice for this country.

NATIONAL DAY OF THE AMERICAN COWBOY

Mr. BARRASSO. Mr. President, I wish to speak on S. Res. 482, a resolution designating July 26, 2008, as "National Day of the American Cowboy."

The cowboy is the icon of Wyoming, representing our history and way of life. Wyoming's cowboy spirit and western values embodies all aspects of our lives. Independence, courage, family values, and good stewardship of the land are all virtues that every Wyomingite holds dear. The people of Wyoming are proud of our cowboys and cowgirls. They carry on our strong traditions and western values.

The National Day of the American Cowboy also holds a special place in Wyoming's heart as we remember our dear friend, Senator Craig Thomas. As many know, this day of recognition initially came about through the efforts of Senator Thomas.

Senator Thomas was a genuine cowboy. He led by example instead of seeking the spotlight. He was a dedicated public servant, a powerful leader, and a straight shooter. He was a loyal family man. He was a beloved role model. All who knew Senator Thomas will remember the humble cowboy who was unwavering in his dedication to God, Wyoming, and his country.

Senator MIKE ENZI and I have continued this effort to honor our American cowboys and cowgirls across the country. I am pleased that the Senate agreed to the resolution. I look forward to celebrating this special day with Wyoming.

FBI'S 100-YEAR ANNIVERSARY

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, the FBI turned 100 years old on June 26, 2008, and so I want to offer some remarks to mark the occasion. This anniversary is the perfect opportunity to look at the FBI's accomplishments and failures over the past 100 years and its challenges for the future.

During the presidency of Theodore Roosevelt, seven U.S. Secret Service operatives moved to the new Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation to start a new mission. Thus, the FBI was born. The FBI has had countless successes in its first centennial. In particular, the Bureau developed a talented corps of professional agents and staff who pioneered new investigative tools that set most of the standards of modern law enforcement.

The FBI had early successes with the arrests of Al Capone and Gangster "Machine Gun" Kelly in the 1930s. Bonnie and Clyde were also permanently put out of business thanks to some local cops and the FBI. The Bureau later went after the Ku Klux Klan in the 1940s and 1950s. It targeted the New York mafia in the 1980s and 1990s, which led to the decline of the Gambino crime family and its infamous leader, John Gotti.

However, the FBI also has had its share of failures. From its own civil rights abuses in unauthorized wiretapping of civil rights leaders, to the tragedies at Ruby Ridge and Waco, to the internal betrayal by special agent Robert Hansen, there have been many dark days in the history of the Bureau.

Still, I am confident that if the FBI is willing to honestly examine its own shortcomings, it can learn the lessons necessary to improve and become more effective at keeping Americans safe and free.

I celebrate with all FBI employees, active and retired, whose difficult and courageous work keeps the rest of us secure.

I also recognize and honor agents who have paid the ultimate price to protect our country from all enemies, foreign and domestic. These heroes deserve praise for their hard work and sacrifice.

The protection of the United States is the FBI's main mission. The FBI is tasked to keep us safe from terrorist attacks, foreign spies, public corruption, infringements on civil rights, organized crime, and major white-collar and violent crime. To serve its mission, the Bureau maintains a worldwide presence in over 400 cities in the United States and 60 countries worldwide.

Since the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, the FBI has focused its efforts on antiterrorism. Its intelligence and diligence have protected our Nation from countless threats to our safety. FBI employees have stepped up in these treacherous times, and we count on them every day. They put their lives on the line for our freedom.

We know they are fulfilling their mission when nothing happens to harm us, when we have another day, week, and year free from a terrorist attack and violent crime.

Like any anniversary, this is a good opportunity for us to look at the FBI's failures so it can learn and grow from its mistakes. For years, I have been a watchdog of the FBI's propensity to retaliate against whistleblowers, the Bureau's unwillingness to cooperate with other agencies, and its inability to update its technology system. I hope on its 100-year anniversary, the FBI will turn a new leaf and correct these problems to create a better, safer century ahead.

Parts of the FBI's internal culture hamper its ability to effectively identify and neutralize threats to national safety. For instance, the Bureau has what I have called a "Pac-Man" mentality, because it tries to gobble up whatever it can of other agencies' jurisdiction, evidence, and cases. At times, it has acted like a lunch-stealing bully on the playground.

Our safety would be much better preserved if the FBI would play nice and share jurisdiction and resources with the other agencies. The FBI should concentrate on its primary mission—fighting terrorism—and let other agencies take the lead on investigations in which they have specialized expertise. For example, often, drug and bombing cases should be handled by the Drug Enforcement Administration, DEA, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, ATF, respectively.

This Pac-Man mentality is evident by the way the FBI demands access to
